

10 big reasons for your baby to get immunized by age 2

Only immunization can protect children against these deadly diseases. But they need to visit a health care professional for the necessary vaccinations five times by the age of 2. Talk to your health care professional about immunization or call the National Immunization Program's toll-free hotline for the immunization center closest to you.
1-800-232-2522 (English) 1-800-232-0233 (Spanish)

You gave them life. Protect it.

Has your 2-year-old had all of her life-saving shots?

Babies need five immunization visits before they turn 2 to protect them against serious childhood killers like measles, tetanus and diphtheria. Yet, one out of every four children in this country is not fully immunized. Call the National Immunization Program's toll-free hotline for more information on the immunization location closest to you: 1-800-232-2522 (English) or 1-800-232-0233 (Spanish).

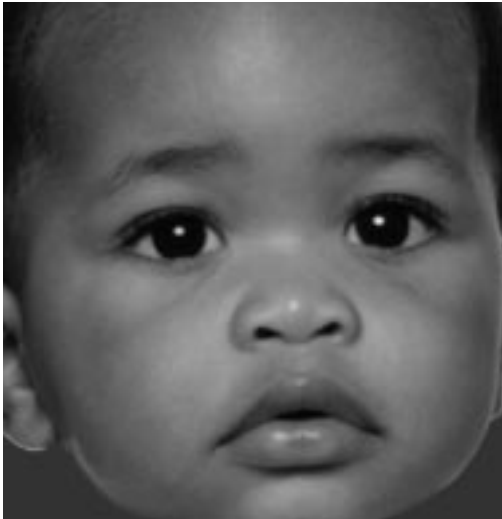

You gave them life.
Protect it.

Doesn't every 2-year-old deserve all her shots?

Babies need five immunization visits before they turn 2 to protect them against serious childhood killers like measles, tetanus, and diphtheria. Yet, one out of every four children in this country is not fully immunized. Call the National Immunization Program's toll-free hotline for more information on the immunization location closest to you: 1-800-232-2522 (English) or 1-800-232-0233 (Spanish).

You gave them life.
Protect it.

One out of every four American children is not fully immunized against deadly childhood disease.

All babies need to visit a doctor or clinic for vaccinations five times by the age of 2. Without all the shots they need, they run the risk of contracting dangerous diseases like measles or diphtheria.

Ask your doctor or health care professional about immunization or call the National Immunization Program's toll-free hotline:
1-800-232-2522 (English) or 1-800-232-0233 (Spanish).

You gave them life. Protect it.